[Four Armored Personnel Carriers and a Destroyer ship with an escort of ten, has intercepted James and Ben'jara's five spacecraft. Another space battle occurs.

The gigantic destroyer has just closed in for the kill.] CONTINUED FROM LAST ISSUE

MATTHEW HUNTINGTON

by

The two Vendsteds, containing James and Ben'jara, were doing their best to turn around but the gigantic destroyer simply trained its rear guns on the twin craft. As the computers were locking in, however, the downed Hellman used its heat seeking missiles to knock off some of the engines and rear cannon. The air leaks resulting from this weren't large, but they were large enough to decompressurize the section and force its sealing off, preventing the usage of the cannons in the back. The giant ship began to slowly turn around.

Although it had helped, the Hellman had made itself an obvious target with the trails of the exhaust from the missiles pointing straight to it. One of the three remaining destroyer's escort craft, which was turned in the right direction anyway, headed straight for the grounded and almost defenseless craft.

THE POEM by Travis Lewis

I SAW A PRETTY BUTTERFLY
SO BEAUTIFUL AND GRAND -
SO I HELD OUT MY FINGER, SIGNALING HIM TO LAND.

I LOOKED AROUND FOR ANOTHER
TO MATE HIM
BUT I COULDN'T -

SO I ATE HIM!

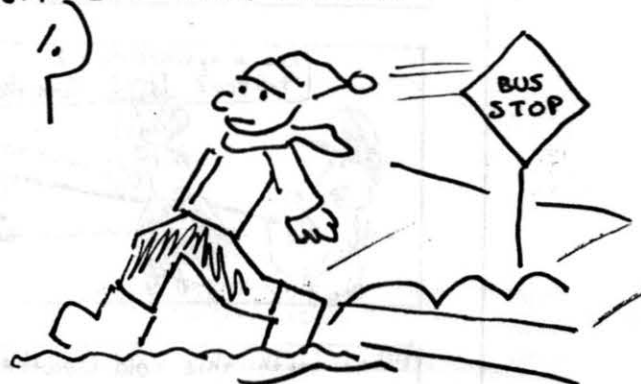

As the ship neared within range (to all forms of detectors, it was impossible to discern the ship from the surrounding rubble) the little Hornet came from behind and below to shoot the escort down. However, this directed it straight for the destroyer, and at the speed it was going, there was no chance of its tiny front-facing engines slowing it down much. It smashed into one of the gaps made by the Hellman and the fuel ignited, which ignited the destroyer's fuel also. The resulting explosion lit up the sky for a few seconds.

NAMON THE HEBIT

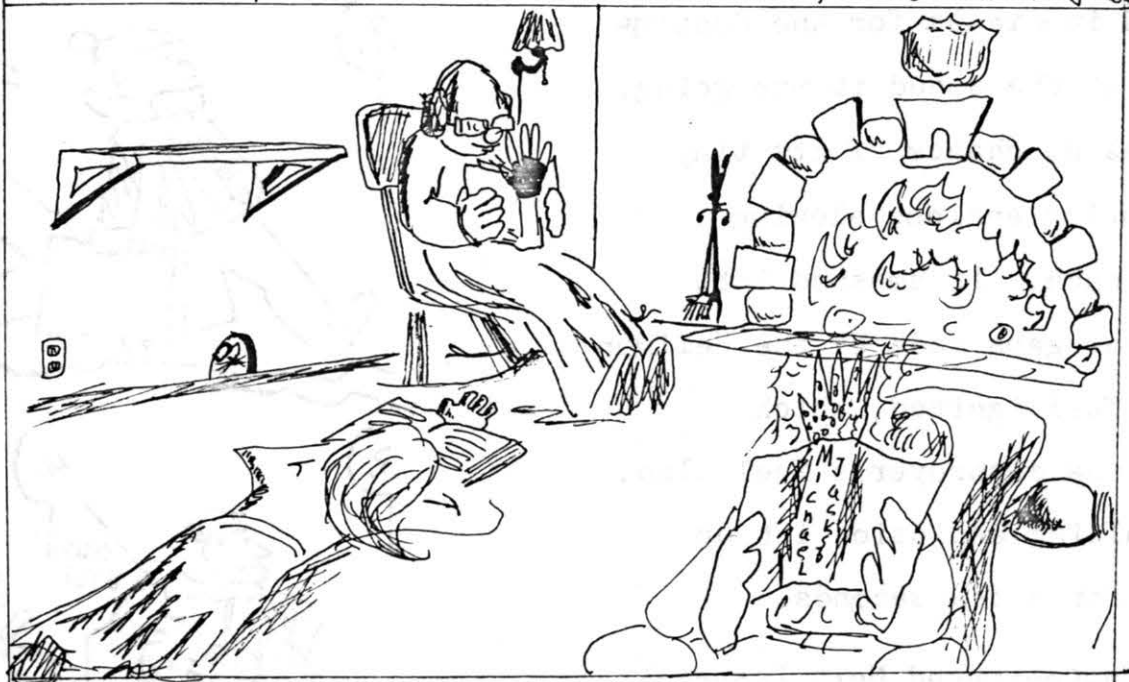

CARTOONS

BY BORIS PACKARD

What with this cold weather, we'll all be able to tell tall stories about this wild winter, for example, the scene below - "It was so cold, we read books with gloves on"

THE ADVENTURES OF MARTIN ROSS

by
STEPHEN OSBOURNE

CHAPTER II

[Martin - 16 year old member of the Nu Sect's Army Interstellar Exploration Program - is a test pilot for Senan Ostoff's new interplanetary spaceship.

Martin and friends are residing in a snow covered estate in the middle of a small forest.]

The doorbell chimed, and Robert answered it. There was a snow covered humanoid hulking in the doorway.

"Uh, come...in."

The figure brushed past him and began stripping off winter wear until it was roughly human size.

"Oh, there you are, Senan," remarked Rob.

Senan's face came close to what he called a smile.

"Where is everybody?" he asked.

Martin appeared out of the computer room. "Where's Adam?" he asked.

"Urgff umph," said another mound of clothes behind Senan.

"Uh, Rob," said Daffyd as he emerged from the kitchen, "help Adam with his clothes, will you?"

"So what brings you here, Senan?" asked Martin.

"Well, I was on my way up to Buffalo to deliver some reactor blueprints Florida gave me, and I got stranded here.

"Since most of the computer equipment in this village seems to be centered around this house, I wonder if I could use your modem to send the stuff the rest of the way?"

"Sure, sure," said Daffyd. "What have you been working on lately?"

Senan was moving toward the computer room, and the others followed.

"Well, I've been working for several months on a human guinea pig grant from government and just lately I've gotten it.

"So Dina has agreed to some calcium tests -"

"Who's Dina?" asked Robert.

"Senan's concubine."

"Shh! Tell no one!" Senan hissed conspiratorially. "The purpose of the tests is to see if you can alter the marrow of the bone without killing it."

"Seems interesting. How are you going to do it?"

Senan was booting a hard disk into the computer.
